I Wanna Be a Diamond...

Santo A. K. Vyborny

2011-07-28

When I was ten years old, my grandfather told me the story of his life. He had been a pilot in World War II, and had flown in some of the most dangerous missions of the war. He had been shot down over Italy, and had spent several months in a POW camp. When he finally returned home, he told me about the things he had seen and the people he had met. It was a very inspiring story, and it made me want to be a pilot myself. I wanted to be a pilot, but my parents did not think it was a good idea. They said that it was too dangerous. But I persisted, and I eventually got the training I needed to become a pilot. I have flown in many different countries, and I have seen many different things. I have flown over mountains and deserts, and I have flown over oceans and forests. It has been an amazing experience, and I would not trade it for anything in the world.
